The Book of Presidents 1865-1965

The London Mathematical Society was established during the energetic and confident heyday of Victorian Britain. Although several learned societies pre-date it, the LMS can claim to have led the way in a number of respects: firstly, in the rigorous reviewing standards it set from the outset, with two independent reviewers being appointed for each paper submitted to the Proceedings; and secondly, in its acceptance of women as full members, which was progressive for its day.

This volume, which contains over eighty photographs, concentrates on the first 100 years of the Society's existence and traces its evolution through its Presidents and De Morgan Medallists, each of whom was a pre-eminent mathematician of his or her day. Through them we learn which branches of the discipline were in vogue at any particular time, and come to appreciate the Society's rich history.
